CURES STOMACH TROUBLES

THE body gets its life from food properly digested. Healthy digestion means pure blood for the body, but stomach troubles arise from carelessness in eating and stomach disorders upset the entire system. Improperly masticated food sours on the stomach, causing distressing pains, belching and nausea. When over-eating is persisted in the stomach becomes weakened and worn out and dyspepsia claims the victim.

Thedford's Black-Draught cures dyspepsia. It frees the stomach and bowels of congested matter and gives the stomach new life. The stomach is quickly invigorated and the natural stimulation results in a good appetite, with the power to thoroughly digest food.

You can build up your stomach with this mild and natural remedy. Try Thedford's Black-Draught today. You can buy a package from your dealer for 25c. If he does not keep it, send the money to The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn., and a package will be mailed you.

A VARIATION

ROBERT JERMAIN COLE

Copyright, 1905, by Robert Jermain Cole

"Men are such monotonous creatures. They march together like that always." The girl waved her hand lightly toward a file of militia that paraded down Fifth avenue. Her companion did not answer immediately.

"You must reduce your complaint to specific charges, Miss Breen," said the young lawyer at length. "What, for example, renders man so tiresome to you?"

"I'm sure I don't know what makes him so. I only know that he is," returned the girl. "He—I mean they—all wear forever the same kind of clothes, walk with the same stride, stick to the same amusements"—

"Are true to the same friends," finished her listener for her, "and, worst of all, persist in expressing admiration for the same girl in the same words. You must find it monotonous."

"Don't be personal, Mr. Roscommon," protested his companion, with a blush.

"I am discussing fact, and that is always personal," replied the man. "It is true, isn't it?" Roscommon had a quiet habit of persistence. He did not talk much, but what he did say was apt to start his companion into a frantic garrulity of self defense.

"What do you mean?" asked the girl. "You certainly would not accuse me of bragging about the number of my admirers. I was only speaking in a general way."

Roscommon was silent, and the girl went on:

"I refuse to testify against myself, but you must give me credit for knowing a few other women. Besides, I have read the novels written by creatures of your own sex. They ought to say a good word for the ingenuity of man, yet their heroes all make love in precisely the same way."

They turned as they walked into Fifty-seventh street, where Miss Breen had lived with her aunt since her father's death. She had always gone with a rather gay set, but a few months after she came out her father had lost most of his money. For the last three years that he lived he insisted on her accepting many invitations, although they were able to do little entertaining.

"AND YOU HAVEN'T ONCE SAID 'I LOVE YOU,'" SHE EXCLAIMED.

Her liveliness of speech and manner, a trifle defiant, masked a hurt pride. She won followers easily among the men—too easily to suit her high spirit. They gave her flattery in plenty, which comforted her as little as gold offered to a starving woman. She was all heart and had almost no vanity. When her father died she was hungry for some one to lavish her affections upon. Yet no one had divined this. The impression had gone about that she would marry anybody for money. She hated poverty, but she hated a lie still worse.

When they entered the house she took off her hat and stood a moment beside a table.

"You may sit down," she said condescendingly to Roscommon. "I shall stand up awhile. You haven't made me tired yet."

"If you were one of these unvarying men how would you propose to a girl?" asked the young man gravely. Miss Breen promptly sat down. After she had rested and meditated for half a minute, she answered:

"It would depend on the girl. That's the very point. Instead of having a formula, such as you men hand down from father to son, I should study the nature of the woman and find words to appeal to her and to her alone. If she loved flowers, I'd spend my last dime on a rose. They say a battle was lost once for want of a horseshoe. More women's hearts are lost for want of a chocolate drop than are dreamed of in your philosophy."

"I have no philosophy that will fit the race of women," corrected the lawyer.

"I'm glad to hear you admit your ignorance!" laughed Miss Breen.

"I did not say I was ignorant. I merely said I had no theories," observed Roscommon.

"Very well, here is a fact for you. I know a man that told a girl of his ambition to be a painter. Then he asked her to marry him. Now, this girl didn't care a hairpin for art, and the only idea she had about it was that artists were always poor and shabby. She was just ready to fall in love with him, and if she had it wouldn't have mattered what he did for a living. If he only had sense enough to tell her how prettily her hair shone in the lamplight he wouldn't be a sour old bachelor now, and she"—

"It looks just as well in the daylight," remarked Roscommon, addressing the mirror behind Madge.

"I hope the subject doesn't bore you, Miss Breen," he went on, "but you have made an impossible condition. You say a man should know the girl. That is well if he can. But now suppose the one thing he knows about her is that he wants to know more. Perhaps the very mystery of her nature attracts him."

"Then let him surprise her into some revelation of herself."

They were silent for a long time after this. The short winter day was almost gone. They could yet see each other through the twilight.

"Miss Breen, did you ever hear that I was a millionaire?" The question came from Roscommon with startling suddenness. His tone was harsh and had a ring of self satisfaction in it. Madge Breen turned impulsively and then looked away, but not before he was aware of the hurt, disappointed expression in her wide open eyes.

"No, and I hate you for telling me now," she flashed.

"I did not tell you. I only asked a question." The harshness was all gone from his tone. For the first time that afternoon Roscommon's voice grew tender. He leaned toward his companion and said:

"They told me you cared only for money—that you had no heart. I knew they lied, but I wanted you to prove it to me. You have shown me the girl I have been waiting to see. You have taught me the way to woo her. I am not rich, Madge, and if I were I should never dream that money could buy you. You say that all men are alike. All but one, you mean. The man you love will be transfigured. I ask you to be my wife, dear, not because of what I can give you, but because of what I can take. A man with any other ambition would not have room to keep the treasure of your love. You can do what you will with me. The only thing I shall boast of is a boundless capacity for being loved. Do you want such a man?"

"And you haven't once said, 'I love you,'" she exclaimed with a touch of amusement in her voice. "That is a slight variation from the usual form. Do you suspect I shall do it all?"

"You would have to try me to find out, no matter what I might say," replied Roscommon.

"Well," she breathed softly and then paused. He rose and walked to her chair and waited, with his head bent toward hers.

"Please," she whispered, "if you don't love me never let me find it out."

A Discreet Servant.

A certain duke was dining in full kilt dress at a highland anniversary dinner, his piper standing behind his chair. At dessert a very handsome and valuable snuffbox belonging to one of the guests was handed round. When the time came to return it to its owner the snuffbox could not be discovered anywhere. A search was made, but with no result, the duke being especially anxious about it.

On the next anniversary he again donned the kilt—which he had not worn in the interval—for the annual dinner. As he was dressing he happened to put his hand in his sporran and there, to his astonishment, found the box which had been lost at the last year's dinner. He turned to his piper and said:

"Why, this is the snuffbox we were all looking for! Did you not see me put it away in my sporran?"

"Yes, your grace."

"Then why did you not tell me?" demanded the duke.

"Because I thought your grace required the little matter kept quiet," responded the piper, with a knowing wink.

Unconsciously Funny Ads.

"Humor," says Mr. Crothers, "is the frank enjoyment of the imperfect." Yes, but not of imperfect fun. And I find the advertiser most deliciously amusing when he least aspires to be. I frankly enjoy his laughterless and unconscious imperfections. "Miss Ellen Terry will positively appear in three pieces," writes he, or "Try our patent lamp chimney and save half your light," or even, "Our fish cannot be approached." A correspondence school of advertising declares in its enthusiastic prospectus, "You will never see the ad. writer play the wall flower in society." And, good lack, why should he? I will pledge my all to find admirers for any author of unwittingly humorous advertisements. Indeed I dare say Mr. Crothers himself would be proud to fellowship with such a one and "frankly enjoy his imperfections," though methinks he would perhaps reserve the right to order his own affairs without assistance from so devious and humorless an intellect.—Atlantic.

Nutmeg Tree and Fruit.

"The nutmeg tree begins to bear at the age of ten years," said a gardener. "It keeps on bearing until it is ninety. The fruit resembles an apricot, and when the fruit is ripe it bursts open, showing at its heart the black nutmeg inclosed in a network of scarlet.

"The nutmeg, after plucking, must be dried. It is dried over a slow fire, and the process is tedious. It often occupies two months.

"Before shipping the nutmegs are always steeped in sea water and lime. This is to protect them from insects. They have nothing but insects to fear. In an insect proof condition they keep—well, they keep practically forever."—New Haven Register.

Menagerie Menus.

Catering to animals requires both a plentiful and varied supply of foods, as may be seen from this report of material fed at the London Zoological gardens last year. For the flesh eating guests there were supplied 144 tons of horseflesh, nearly 9 tons of goatflesh and 9,530 chicken heads. Fourteen and a half tons of fish, in addition to 1,260 pints of shrimps, furnished the water fowl with their daily fare, while 207 loads of hay and 6,030 bunches of greens supplied the ruminants. Other items on the list were 872 pounds of grapes, 498 pounds of sugar, 6,262 loaves of bread, 5,086 quarts of milk, 303 pounds of crackers and more than 33,000 eggs. The chicken heads were for the various members of the rat family, the eggs were fed to the birds, and the shrimps formed the easiest way to the affections of the flamingoes.

Humility and a Hair Shirt.

"The bishop of Arichat," said Father Burke, "is a most unassuming creature—a man who keeps the stone in his episcopal ring turned against his palm, so that he may not be recognized as a bishop."

"He must be an extraordinary person," Stephen Essex, the Methodist parson, admitted.

"It is his humility. I am told he wears a hair shirt the year round."

"Is that an evidence of humility?" Stephen asked, with an incredulous smile.

"Try it and see," the priest advised.

"Have you tried it, Father Burke?"

"Yes, and one day's trial convinced me that I was neither a saint nor a rhinoceros," he said, with a wry face.—From "The Bishop's Niece," by George H. Picard.

The Flying Fish.

The flying fish when in the air uses its pectoral fins precisely as a boy does a kite, the weight of the fish's body taking the place of the string. As a boy runs when he lets a kite go, so the flying fish makes a preliminary rush through the water before ascending into the air. In this way as it leaves the surface air impinges upon the lower area of the fin wings, carrying the body upward and onward with a gliding motion. The anatomical structure of the flying fish is such that it cannot flap its "wings," and so it possesses little or no guiding power when in flight. This accounts for the fact that it frequently finds its way through ships' open ports or down skylights or lands helplessly upon deck.

Hans Christian Andersen.

A critic writes of Hans Christian Andersen: "His vanity was perhaps his most salient characteristic. He was photographed scores of times in every position and costume, and he never wearied of new presentments of his strong but unhandsome features. His whims were legion. He had a morbid horror of being buried alive and always set a slip of paper by his bedside bearing the words, 'Seg es skindod' ('I am in a trance'). His hosts often found him an exacting guest, but his little failings were easily pardoned for the sake of his genius and his childlike nature."

An Irish Incident.

"Driver," said an English tourist who was being driven on a jaunting car through the Donegal highlands, "I notice that when you speak to your friends whom you meet on the road you invariably do so in Irish, but when you address your horse you do so in English. How is this?" To which came the retort: "Musha, now thin, isn't English good enough for him?"

Good Idea.

"The ancient Chaldeans," observed the professor, "used to write their letters on bricks."

"And a good idea too," chimed in practical Mr. Graball. "Then when a girl sent a fellow's letters back to him he could use 'em to build a stable or something."

"Shut your eyes, open your mouth and see what luck will bring you."

Many a woman is weak and sick, nervous and discouraged. She suffers from headache, backache and other ills. She wants to be well, but all she does is to shut her eyes and open her mouth for medicine and trust to luck for results. She "doctors" month after month, often year after year in this same blind, haphazard fashion, and receives no permanent benefit.

Women take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription with their eyes open to the fact that it cures womanly ills. It cures irregularity. It dries debilitating drains. It heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness. There is no trusting to luck by those who use "Favorite Prescription."

"In the year 1903 my health was poor," writes Mrs. J. Hack, of 242 Broadway, Buffalo, N. Y. "I suffered from falling of womb, a disagreeable discharge, painful monthly periods, headache, backache and pains in the limbs. Every month was confined to bed for two or three days. Was weak, nervous and hysterical; life was a burden to myself and I made every one in the family unhappy because I was so irritable. My husband got me four bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and before I had taken the first bottle I was feeling some relief. The medicine made me well and strong, free from nervousness, aches and pain, and I felt like a new woman. Before I used the 'Favorite Prescription' I had been taking another physician's medicine for nearly three months, but received no benefit. Your medicine is certainly the best in the world."

A man or woman who neglects constipation suffers from slow poisoning. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. One little "Pellet" is a gentle laxative, and two a mild cathartic. Don't let a selfish seller over-persuade you to accept a substitute for these Original Little Liver Pills, first put up by old Dr. R. V. Pierce over 40 years ago. Much imitated but never equaled.

Making and Saving.

It is often a mystery to the man of intelligence and education how so many of his fellow beings, for instance foreigners and those whose preparation for life has been so scanty indeed, particularly along intellectual lines, get rich so quickly. It is often the case that the poor foreigner, unskilled and uneducated, suddenly blossoms forth as the butterfly from its chryslis, into prominence and riches.

The secret of this transformation lies in the old adage, "It is not what we make, but what we save." It is a well-known fact that education does not count much in the struggle for wealth. Skill or training in some particuar line of work helps considerably, but even that is unnecessary if a man is naturally dexterous. It is much easier to make money than it is to keep it and the secret of saving is not taught by education nor solved by intelligence. Rather is it rendered more difficult thereby, for with the acquirement of learning and knowledge of the world come new wants and new ideas, all of which take money.

The bright up-to-date young man of America, with the education offered by our excellent school system, goes to work in a mercantile house, say for $2 per day. He first of all wishes to live comfortably and have plenty to eat. He also desires to dress well and to have money to spend on amusements. He probably goes to a theatre now and then, taking with him some chum; he buys candy for some girl, magazines for himself and has any amount of desires and opportunity to spend more money if he had it.

If his salary is raised he may think of marriage and he selects a girl in his own circle for his wife. She will not be content to live in two rooms in the city, but will at least want a flat in an apartment house, or if in the country, she will want a respectable looking cottage, although less pretentious shacks be for rent. She must have artistic furniture, books and pictures and must also be dressed well. Then, too, she wants to go to concerts, theatres and lectures occasionally for she cannot afford to get behind times. With all these wants, desires and neccessities it will take the average young man in business a long time before he can save enough to be counted well off.

The poor foreigner with no educationor trade, but with some intelligence and keen business instinct, comes to America and gets small wages somewhere as a day laborer. He does not care for his personal appearance, has no laundry bills, does not care in what hole in the wall he lives, is not particular what he eats so long as it sustains life. And all the time he is getting so much a day for his work. He does not want books or magazines, does not crave the theatre, has no friends on whom he must spend money, and save for a drink now and then or a hunting or fishing trip, he spends no money on amusement. When his wages are raised he may think, too, of getting married, but he selects a hard working girl, who is content to live with him in the hole in the wall or in some modest shack, who does not wish for more in the house other than a few chairs, a wash tub and a boiler and who does not think of wearing anything but calico wrappers. With such a partner this thrifty type of man casts his lot.

In a few short years he may not have made the money that the other fellow has, but he has saved pretty nearly all he has made and by his thrift becomes a rich man, while the other fellow is still a plodder. There are many cases like the one just cited and the results are inevitably the same. Both types of men think they are getting most out of life, but this is a matter of opinion and philosophy which can only be solved personally by each.

We must particularly compliment Portland on her hospitality. The California Press Association was shown the greatest courtesy in Portland by everyone, even to the street-railway employees, from whom their brothers in San Francisco might well learn a lesson or two in politeness. The Board of Trade and the Commercial Club spared no expense to lavish entertainment on us. The S. P. railroad facilities on the trip were also excellent and deserve special mention.

Excursions to the East at Half Fare

During the coming summer months rare opportunity will be given to visit eastern cities at a minimum expense.

Tickets will be sold by the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad at practically half the regular rates, or one fare for the round trip from California points to Denver, Omaha, Kansas City, Memphis, St. Louis, Chicago and many other points. For a slight extra cost trip may be made via Portland with a free stop-over at the Lewis and Clarke Fair.

The world-famed scenery of the Denver & Rio Grande needs no introduction to most travelers. The Canon of the Grande, the Eagle River Canon, the Canon of the Arkansas, the Black Canon of the Gunnison, the Royal Gorge, and Pike's Peak, form but a part of that glorious panorama, all of which is viewed by daylight from the new observation cars with open tops—as one passenger said, "It is just like touring in an auto."

Through sleeping cars to all principal points east.

Mr. W. J. Shotwell, General Agt., D. & R. G. R. R. Co., 625 Market street, San Francisco, will, on application, quote lowest fares, arrange sleeping car accomodations and all details of your trip, and send you free some beautifully illustrated travel books. Write today.

Bitten in Face by Bulldog

A little two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dagneau was bitten in the face by a bulldog one day this week and painfully injured. The child was playing with the dog, when it suddenly attacked her, larcerating her face. She was taken to Dr. Thomson, who dressed the wounds.

Joe Fagen, the real Joe of baseball fame, drifted into Sonoma to see the races on the Fourth. Joe is not as stout as he used to be, but nevertheless he answered the purpose of an awning for the bookmaker's stand. Murphy says that Mr. Fagen is the gamest sport that ever entered town and all the boys would like to see him here again on the 9th of September.

The Fourth

Sonoma can congratulate herself that no serious results occurred from the indiscriminate celebration of the Fourth of July this year. Never before have we had so many fireworks, and the fact that we escaped fires and accidents seems miraculous.

One sky-rocket started the fire at Glen Ellen. We had several narrow escapes. There were several grass fires resulting from firecrackers and a hot-air balloon all aflame dropped down in the wood bin in the rear of the French Bakery. It was timely discovered, but took the efforts of several men to extinguish it. Had it fallen on the dry roof of Poulson's blacksmith shop fire would have been inevitable. On Spain street a culvert took fire and was blazing high and igniting a field of grass when it was discovered.

Impressive Ceremonies

Beautifully impressive were the services conducted in this valley on Sunday by Archbishop Montgomery, who administered the Sacrament of Confirmation to a class of fifty children in St. Francis' Church, and later blessed the new St. Mary's Church at Glen Ellen.

Music by the choir added much to both ceremonies, and large crowds were present to hear the Archbishop's sermons.

At the luncheon which followed the blessing of the church at Glen Ellen, the ladies cleared $33.50 for the benefit of the church fund.

General Debility

Day in and out there is that feeling of weakness that makes a burden of itself.

Food does not strengthen.

Sleep does not refresh.

It is hard to do, hard to bear, what should be easy,—vitality is on the ebb, and the whole system suffers.

CELEBRATE FOURTH AT RACE TRACK

Big Crowd Attend Sonoma Driving Club's Meet and are Pleased—Other Doings

Sonoma celebrated the Fourth of July this year with a big race meet at the local track under the auspices of the Sonoma Driving Club. The gate receipts were large and by 1:30 P. M., several hundred people were in attendance.

It was a lively day with considerable doing in the betting ring. Many outside sports were present.

The program was made up of a road race, saddle horse race, free-for-all, thoroughbred dash, 2:30 class event, 2:40 class event and a colt race.

The first race was won by Fanny Parnell, Tule Boy finishing second. Time 3:01¼.

In the second race Nada finished first with Wild Idle as second. Time 0.58.

In the free-for-all Ryan's Arthur F. was too speedy for Al Sandy and Ryan's superior driving in two heats gave the coon no chance to lay in behind his horse. Time 2:25.

Blondura came in first in the thoroughbred half mile dash, Coney Island second and Lou Rey third. Time 00:55.

The fifth race was run between Babe and Lulu F., Chatterbox having been scratched. Babe, driven by Ryan, showed bad at the start, but had the speed to him at the finish and won. Time 2:40.

In the sixth race Knuckles' Trifle won. Time 2:44. Kendall's horse pulled out in the last half mile. Poulson's McKinley finished second.

The seventh race, half-mile, was won by Gray Wilkes, with Alto Charley second. Time 1:32.

It was a great day all around and much excitement was manifested. Another meet will be held on September 9th.

In the evening our natal day was celebrated by a grand ball at Union Hall and the various summer resorts in the valley also had dances for the pleasure of their guests.

Latest Songs and Jokes at Minstrels

The latest songs and jokes will be heard at the Minstrel Show and Garden Party to be given at the Emparan place next Friday evening for the benefit of the fountain.

Lulu Belle, direct from gay Paree, will repeat one of her inimitable song and dance successes—the first time in the United States. Mirandy will be heard in a laughable monologue. Cole and Jackson, lately with Rose and West and Al Feel's, will hold down the ends and the King of the Bungalow will be interlocutor.

Don't fail to hear the dusky belle of the troupe in "Sweet Adeline," which will be sung with quartette chorus.

Don't miss the jokes and side-splitting yarns and the musical numbers on the banjo by a late member of the Black Patti troupe, who comes to Sonoma for this evening only. And finally be prepared to witness one of the most clever sketches of the age, which will conclude the program.

Marion Mason, said to be the most beautiful woman on the stage, will appear in the leading role.

Drove to Sonoma Grove

A six-horse coach laden with a jolly crowd of San Franciscans came over to Tiburon Sunday and drove from there to Sonoma Grove. The trip consumed six hours. The gentlemen in the party were the guests of Wm. Bastian at his popular resort over the Fourth.

Abe Morrissey, the well-known stevedore of the Pacific Stone and Ballast Company, handled the ribbons en route.

The following were in the party: John Atwood, Jack Kennedy, Tim Smeddy, Jack McLain, Tom Cooper and Tom McLaughlin.

Kennedy won renown on the trip through his excellent taste for canned goods, particularly beans.

John Steiner Hurt in Runaway

John Steiner, one of the proprietors of the new brewery and a brother-in-law of Joe Keechler, was painfully injured in a runaway last Monday.

Mr. Steiner had taken off the bridle from his horse to let it feed. The animal took fright, and while trying to hold it Mr. Steiner was thrown down, the team passing over his body. He received the full weight upon his chest and in the mixup that followed his shoulder was fractured and he was otherwise painfully hurt.

What frightened the horse is a mystery. Mr. Steiner's many friends are glad to hear that no serious results will come of the accident.

FIERCE FIRE AT GLEN ELLEN

Postoffice Block Destroyed on 4th—Many Burned Out—Loss Heavy

A fierce fire, which had its origin on the roof of the Payne residence, burned down the Postoffice block in the heart of Glen Ellen on the night of the Fourth of July.

The fire broke out at about 9:10 P. M., just as dancing had been commenced in Mervyn Hall. Merry-making was shortly transformed into fighting fire, but despite the efforts of the many volunteer firemen the block was doomed.

Payne's dwelling was first destroyed and the flames soon jumped to Poppe's store and residence. the Postoffice, Marten's saloon and A. M. Hardman's store, all of which were completely destroyed.

The loss is partially covered by insurance. Some mail matter was destroyed by the fire.

Death of a Prominent Young Man

DIED—July 1, 1905, at Sonoma, Sonoma County, California, Frederick Sampson Mathewson, beloved son of Mr. and Mrs. Harley P. Mathewson, and nephew of Mrs. Guy P. Kennedy of Chico, California, aged 16 years and 19 days.

Frederick Mathewson, after an illness of only a few weeks, died at the home of his parents near here on Saturday. Young Mathewson was a youth of much promise and was possessed of extremely fine sensibilities and intellect. His death has been a great shock to his dear ones and to all those who knew him. The remains were taken to San Francisco on Monday last and cremated in Odd Fellows' Cemetery. Services were held at the undertaking parlors of N. Gray.

Miss Nellie Gordenker, who is completing a course in the Woman's Hospital in San Francisco, has been visiting her parents here. Miss Gordenker will spend the rest of her vacation at Vallejo and Selby.

The beautiful grounds around the O'Donnell home were festively gay last Monday night during the Garden Party, which was the grandest success of the season. Fine music and an excellent program, which included the balcony scene from "Romeo and Juliet," was rendered.

The fire is the chief topic of Glen Ellen this week. The Fourth did not pass off quietly by any means. Property was not only destroyed, but several lives were endangered. Blacksmith Hollinshead was overcome while fighting the fire and became unconscious in one of the buildings, and but for the timely arrival of help, he would have lost his life. As it was his hair was badly singed. Station Agent Cobb, who was overcome by the fire suffered such ill effects that he was taken to a San Francisco hospital on Wednesday for treatment. Chas. Poppe, who was a heavy loser, has rented the McCord place, where he has taken up his temporary residence. Mr. Poppe and his family did not save any of their effects whatever. Mr. Poppe was the one who discovered the fire and gave the first alarm. A. M. Hardman, who was also burned out, has rented one of the O'Donnel cottages. Mr. Payne lost everything, even his account books. Mrs. Payne is lying ill in Sonoma and does not yet know of the fire.

YE EDITORS AT THE PORTLAND FAIR.

On Sunday the Fair is closed during the morning, but in the afternoon the States' buildings are open to visitors. In St. Louis no one was admitted, even to the grounds on Sunday, but in Portland visitors are allowed to walk through the grounds and all over the green terraces at will.

The Trail is closed on this day and night, making one sweet short lull in the infernal din that pervades this place all week. By special permit the California Press Association, together with Governor Pardee, were taken through the Government buildings, which are built across the lake and are connected with the other buildings by "The Bridge of Nations." Here the arts of war were demonstrated to us and we viewed the military styles of the old and the new schools. One of the most interesting and amusing government exhibits is the Dead Letter Office Exhibit, which includes much laughable dead mail matter. Among the things which went astray and are on exhibit are several sets of false teeth, live snakes and centipedes, babie's clothes, bottles of whiskey, locks of hair and countless letters and jewelry. Governor Pardee was much interested in these exhibits and laughed heartily at many of them.

The Fishery exhibit was particularly fine and was attractively displayed in the west side of the building. No one visiting the Exposition should fail to visit the Government building.

Sunday evening we took dinner at the Commercial Club in Portland, a privelege granted very seldom to visitors, as the club is very exclusive. The organization has handsome quarters in the heart of the city and in the grill we enjoyed a splendid dinner. The service and appointments were all that could be desired. After dinner we were taken to the cupola above, where we viewed the city below.

Monday morning Mr. and Mrs. J. P. McDonell, Miss McDonell, Mrs. Hotz and ye Editors left Portland for Shasta Springs. The trip down was very enjoyable. The day was well spent viewing Portland's suburbs and Southern Oregon, the last glimpse of which, however, showed dark skies and rain, which for us spoiled all enchantment of the scene, beautiful though it is. We met many delightful travelers on this journey.

In the morning we awoke to find ourselves in "God's own country," California—no more rain and leaden skies, but a clear morning with bright, blue skies above and golden sunshine everywhere. Mt. Shasta, snow crowned, loomed up to the east and the "dear old hills of California," with their forests of green never before looked so fair to us as they did then in contrast to the country we had left behind.

We arrived at Shasta Springs at about 6:40 A. M. It is a beautiful spot with the snow-covered peak behind, its rustic trails, its countless waterfalls and streams. At the hotel on the summit we stayed for twenty-four hours, rejoining our party on Wednesday morning after a much enjoyed rest.

The trip to San Francisco consumed about twelve hours. We arrived in San Francisco at 7:47 Wednesday evening. The trip immediately after leaving Shasta is beautiful, but later we passed through the hot Sacramento Valley, where at noon the heat was terrible and it was hard to appreciate this part of the country. Thursday found us at home once more in Sonoma Valley—the only place to live. Our trip has made us more appreciative of our own section. Here we have that golden sunshine, which one cannot buy for love nor money in Oregon, and all the beauties of Shasta within two hours of San Francisco. It is good to make these pilgrimages to other places. It broadens one's horizon and endows us with a better appreciation of what we often take for granted.

No one should miss this trip and the Lewis and Clarke Exposition. You will be amply repaid for the effort.

CITY TRUSTEES TO SELL BONDS

Other Matters Transacted at Regular Meeting on Wednesday Night

The regular monthly meeting of the City Trustees was held on Wednesday evening. The following bills were allowed:

J. H. Albertson, salary for June, $15.00; Chas. Togni, sprinkling, $78.00; W. O. Hocker, supplies, $19.78; Mrs. J. A. Poppe, merchandise, $1.40; L. H. Green, lumber, $14.48; Sonoma Valley Company, lights for May and June $68.32; J. McGimsey, services, $3.00; J. B. Small, services and supplies, $7.80; Total $207.78.

A petition was received from L. Breitenbach asking that he be reappointed sexton of Mountain Cemetery. He was reappointed, but in lieu of a complaint that he had not satisfactorily located a plot and had not conferred with the Cemetery Committee, an investigation was ordered to ascertain whether he had acted according to the law. The street lighting contract was renewed for another month.

It was decided, on motion of Mr. McDonell to advertise the bonds for sale.

The Street Committee was authorized to have a proper drain pipe put on the fountain.

Bids for city printing will be advertised for.

Because of the reckless use of fire-works this Fourth, a sane suggestion was made by Trustee Poppe that an ordinance be framed prohibiting the sale and use of fireworks within the city limits. A bridge was burned on Spain street on the night of the Fourth through the reckless use of fire-works and it will mean considerable expense to repair it.

A CHANGE OF PARTNERS

[Original.]

One summer evening a rowboat containing two young men and two young women was drifting idly on the Allegheny river above the city of Pittsburg. They were two pairs of lovers, John Baron and Lillie Beck, Bartle Farr and Margaret Ferris. If any one would have told them that within a very short time there would be a transposition among them as fiances they would not have believed it. Nevertheless such a change came to pass.

John Baron was one of those phlegmatic, taciturn, undemonstrative fellows who usually choose their opposites, and in Lillie Beck he found exactly the girl to attract him. Bartle Farr was a gay, devil may care young man, who found in Margaret Ferris those steady qualities that a man of his character seemed to need. Everybody said that both couples would make an admirable match.

It was in the days when nitroglycerin was supplied from above Pittsburg on the Allegheny to the oil fields in Pennsylvania, floated down in stiletto-like boats some thirty feet long by four feet wide. Each boat carried enough nitroglycerin to blow anything it struck to the clouds. It was run by two men, who had strict orders to lie up at nightfall. In daytime they could be seen far enough ahead to enable such craft as they came across to get out of the way, and, since they did not run at night, there was no necessity for accident.

The party in the skiff had pulled far up the river during the afternoon, intending to drift down leisurely with the current in the twilight. Bartle Farr, who never took thought for the future, insisted on rowing up much farther than was intended. Margaret Ferris had endeavored to check his enthusiasm, but on this occasion was unequal to the task, or, rather, she permitted him to have his way, only warning him that in case they were caught out on the river in the dark and anything happened she would hold him responsible.

Twilight was fading into night, and they were still several miles above the city drifting down with the current. Margaret proposed that the men should take to the oars and was seconded by Baron. Whereupon Farr declared that they were having the best part of their excursion and as for himself he proposed to enjoy it. Baron took a pair of oars and began to row. At this Farr made a curt remark about his timidity at being out after dark without a protector. Baron made no reply, but kept on pulling.

When the night settled down upon them Farr and Miss Ferris were in the bow, Farr with his back between the two gunwales, Miss Ferris sitting on the foremost seat, facing him. Miss Beck was at the tiller, Baron on the "stroke" seat rowing. Suddenly something black on the river appeared within a few yards of them, and a voice shouted, "Get out of the way for your lives!" and two splashes followed as of persons jumping into the water.

In another moment John Baron recognized the dim outline of a nitroglycerin boat coming straight for the skiff. At the same moment Farr, who had risen to see what was coming, recognized the danger. He plunged into the water and dived to avert the coming explosion. Baron, putting all his strength into one supreme effort, gave two strokes with the port oar, and before he could give a third the nose of the nitroglycerin boat rubbed the stern of the skiff. For a few seconds the side of the explosive craft slid along the stern of the skiff, then the danger had passed.

Baron took in the situation at once. The men on the boat had been running her too late into the night, and on coming upon the skiff, after shouting a warning, had jumped overboard. The situation after the danger had passed was this: Farr was swimming for the skiff, Miss Beck was lying in a faint in the stern. Baron was resting on his oars, while Miss Ferris was sitting quietly on the forward seat. Her cheeks flamed at the cowardice of her lover, who had left her to die while he saved himself.

Baron knew that the nitroglycerin boat being without guidance would go on down the river, liable at any moment to cause great loss of life and property. He was a good swimmer and resolved to catch it. Plunging into the water, he swam lustily, gaining on it all the while till at last he caught it. Pulling himself upon the deck, he seized a rope fixed to the bow, tied the line around his body, and, plunging again into the water, swam for the shore.

In this he ran a fearful risk. A rock or a root or a tree if struck would blow up the boat and him with it. Landing on a point, he allowed the boat to swing downstream with the current, then fastened his rope to a stump.

The next morning John Baron's feat was known in Pittsburg and Allegheny, and he became a hero. As for the two men who deserted the boat neither ever showed his face in that region again. The day after the party reached home Miss Ferris wrote Farr a note breaking their engagement. Baron had noticed his fiance's collapse and that Miss Ferris retained her equanimity. From that moment he showed the latter a preference, which resulted in the breaking of his engagement, and he afterward became engaged to Miss Ferris.

Bartle Farr, when he found that he had lost Miss Ferris, either to show that he was not inconsolable or from sheer desperation, took up with the neglected Miss Beck. She was not a strong character. Farr made love desperately and won her. He derived some satisfaction in making the other two believe that he was just as well satisfied as if the exchange had not occurred. WINIFRED ROBERTS.

CHOLERA INFANTUM

Child Not Expected to Live From One Hour to Another, But Cured by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

Ruth, the little daughter of E. N. Dewey of Agnewville, Va., was seriously ill of cholera infantum last summer. "We gave her up and did not expect her to live from one hour to another," he says, "happened to think of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and got a bottle of it from the store. In five hours I saw a change for the better. We kept on giving it and before she had taken the half of one small bottle she was well." This Remedy is for sale by Shoults & Co.

Hot weather has prevailed in San Francisco as well as here this week.

CROUP

Is a violent inflammation of the mucous membrane of the wind-pipe, which sometimes extends to the larynx and bronchial tubes, and is one of the most dangerous diseases of children. It almost always comes on in the night. Give frequent small doses of Ballard's Horehound Syrup and apply Ballard's Snow Liniment externally to the throat. 25c, 50c and $1.00. Sold by L. S. Simmons.

The usual accidents this Fourth should be a lesson to celebrants next.

One Dollar Saved Represents Ten Dollars Earned

The average man does not save to exceed ten per cent of his earnings. He must spend nine dollars in living expenses for every dollar saved. That being the case he cannot be too careful about unnecessary expenses. Very often a few cents properly invested, like buying seeds for his garden, will save several dollars outlay later on. It is the same in buying Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It costs but a few cents, and a bottle of it in the house often saves a doctor's bill of several dollars. For sale by Shoults & Co.

The Taft party arrived this week. Miss Alice Roosevelt is in the party.

Cheerfully Recommended for Rheumatism

O. G. Higbee, Danville, Ills. writes, Dec. 2, 1901: "About two years ago I was laid up for four months with rheumatism. I tried Ballard's Snow Liniment; one bottle cured me. I can cheerfully recommend it to all suffering from like affliction. 25c, 50c and $1.00. Sold by L. S. Simmons.

Hart was the winner in the ring at Reno.

Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy—the Best in Existence

T. M. Wood, manager of the White County News, Beebe, Ark., is a representative southern business man who does not hesitate in expressing his good opinion of a well known remedy. He says, "It gives me pleasure to recommend Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, having used it myself and in my family with the best results. In fact I believe it to be the best remedy of its kind in existence." Sold by Shoults & Co.

There will be another race meet hereon September 9th.

Louis J. His Only Chance.

"Is there a man in all this audience," demanded the female lecturer on woman's rights, "that has ever done anything to lighten the burden on his wife's shoulders? What do you know of woman's work? Is there a man here," she continued, folding her arms and looking over the assembly with superb scorn, "that has ever got up in the morning, leaving his tired, wornout wife to enjoy her slumbers, gone quietly downstairs, made the fire, cooked his own breakfast, sewed the missing buttons on the children's clothes, darned the family stockings, scoured the pots and kettles, cleaned and filled the lamps and done all this if necessary day after day uncomplainingly? If there be such a man in this audience let him rise up! I should really like to see him."

And in the rear of the hall a mild looking man in spectacles, in obedience to the summons, timidly arose. He was the husband of the eloquent speaker. It was the first time he had ever had a chance to assert himself.—Novel Magazine.

Uses For Hymn Books.

"I made a few calls the other day," said the pastor of an uptown church to his congregation, "and in one of the houses I saw a strange thing. What do you think? One of the church hymn books, the property of this church, had been carried home and was placed under the leg of the table to lengthen it out. I remonstrated at this menial use of hymn books. Apologies and blushes were profuse. Now, I am not scolding about this, but hymn books cost this church money, and if any of you have tables too short in the legs please put a newspaper under them or a piece of wood. If you do this, we won't have to send out and buy another hundred hymn books, as we did last week."

The pastor had no sooner ended these remarks than a girl sitting almost under his nose calmly opened a hymn book, placed it between her back and the back of the pew and settled comfortably down to listen to the sermon.—New York Press.

Coleridge's Home at Nether Stowey.

The cottage was at the western end of the village, and there it stands yet, a poor, ugly house, close on the street. We went in, and after making clear to the good woman who owned it that we were not looking for lodgings we saw all that there was to see of the dwelling. There were four rooms, two downstairs and two above. All were bare and disorderly, because, as the woman explained, housecleaning was in progress. It was needed. She showed us a winding stair, hardly better than a ladder, which led from the lower to the upper rooms. There was no view, no garden. But in Coleridge's day there was a small plot of ground belonging to the house and running back to the large and pleasant place of his friend Poole.—Dr. Henry Van Dyke in Scribner's.

Blank Verse.

Blank or unrhymed is that form of heroic verse which is commonly employed in English dramatic and epic poetry. It was introduced by the Earl of Surrey, who died in 1547, in his translation of the second and fourth books of "Eneid." It was first employed in the drama in Sackville and Norton's tragedy of "Ferrex and Porrex," which was printed in 1565, but it was not till Marlowe adopted it in his play of "Tamburlaine the Great" that it became the form regularly employed in the metrical drama, which it has since, with only occasional intervals, remained. After Milton's use of it in "Paradise Lost" it was widely extended to many other classes of composition.

Growth of the Hair.

The influence of diet on the growth of hair has often been discussed. It has been shown that starchy mixtures, milk and many other foods recognized as being highly nutritious are, in fact, sure death to hair growth. Chemical analysis proves that the hair is composed of 5 per cent of sulphur and its ash of 20 per cent of silicon and 10 per cent of iron and manganese. The foods which contain the largest per cent of the above named elements are meat, oatmeal and graham. Henry pointedly says, "Nations which eat most meat have the most hair."

Wanted to Be Useful.

Woman of the House (with shawl tied around her head)—What are you bothering me now for? Can't you see we're getting ready to move? Ruffon Rats—Yes'm. I thought mebby you had some pies or scraps o' cake that wuzn't wurth movin' an' you might like to git rid of 'em, ma'am.—Chicago Tribune.

Cause of the Row.

Mrs. Popley—For goodness' sake, what's the matter with Willie? Mr. Popley (from the bathroom)—Oh, he wants the earth. Mrs. Popley—Wants the earth? Mr. Popley—Yes; at least that portion of it that I'm trying to wash off his hands and face.—Philadelphia Press.

Judging Her Appetite.

Very Stout Old Lady (watching the lions fed)—'Pears to me, mister, that ain't a very big piece of meat for such an animal. Attendant—It may seem like a small piece of meat to you, ma'am, but it's big enough for the lion.

Cultivate the Difficulty.

The way to get to the top is to cultivate the difficult. The way to stay at the bottom is to cultivate that which almost anybody else similarly circumstanced can do as well.—Troy Press.

Everything that is worth thinking has already been thought before. We must only try to think it again.—Goethe.
